

♀ resembling male except for usual sexual differences in end of abdomen. Length about 1 mm.

FIG. 2.—End of abdomen, showing male genitalia of Meoneura freta sp.n.

This species resembles flavifacies in the colour of face, but that species, in addition to having more than one pair of dorsocentral bristles and a different hypopygium, has the ocellar triangle more distinct and more polished and some small bristles on disc of fourth abdominal tergite.

Described from four males and two females taken at Blakeney Point on the Norfolk coast on July 17th, 1934.

At the same time and place I took additional specimens of M. bicuspadata Coll., and would call attention to the fact that the ocellar triangle of this species is neither so large nor so sharply differentiated from rest of frons as in M. neottiophila Coll.

Finally, I can record the capture at Barton Mills (Suffolk) at the end of May, 1935, of additional specimens of M. neglecta Coll. Raylands, Newmarket.

June 12th, 1937.
