

AN ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BATFLIES

(Diptera: Streblidae; Nycteribiidae)¹

By T. C. Maa²

Abstract. This bibliography lists, up to the end of 1970, about 800 references relating to the batflies or Streblidae and Nycteribiidae. Annotations are given regarding the contents, dates of publication and other information of the references listed. A subject index is appended.

The following bibliography is the result of an attempt to catalogue and partly digest all the literature (published up to the end of 1970) relating to the systematics and other aspects of the 2 small dipterous families of batflies, i.e., Streblidae and Nycteribiidae. The bibliography includes a list of about 800 references, with annotations, and a subject index. Soon after the start of the compilation of literature in 1960, it was found that many odd but often important records were scattered in books and other publications on travels, expeditions, speleology, mammalogy, parasitology, etc. A number of such publications are not available even in the largest entomological libraries and might well have been inadvertently overlooked. While some 50 additional references are provisionally omitted because of the lack of sufficient information, new contributions on the subject are almost continuously coming out from various sources. This bibliography does not, therefore, pretend to be complete and exhaustive. The time and effort devoted toward the compilation would be worthwhile should this bibliography be of interest to its readers and the annotations and subject index be of benefit. The manuscript has been revised several times and it is hoped that not too many errors, omissions and other discrepancies have developed during the course of preparation. Notes on a few points of this bibliography are given below.

SELECTION OF REFERENCES. In the selection of the references to be listed, strong emphasis has been placed on scientific originality, no matter how brief and preliminary it might be. Textbooks and the like are not included unless they contain information of originality (such as in G. M. Allen 1939, Oldroyd 1964) or much historical interest. Abstracts, translations, independently paged separata, fascimile editions, second and subsequent printings, book reviews and so on are generally either omitted in the list, or only mentioned in the annotations. The bibliographies of batflies published by earlier authors have been checked and compared. Some of the entries there listed are here deleted because they either are purely secondary in nature or have no direct bearings on the batflies, or the information about their pagination, contents etc., is insufficient. For instance, Wenzel, Tipton & Kiewlicz's (1966) bibliography of the New World Streblidae lists 123 entries, while Theodor's (1967b) bibliography of the Nycte-riidae of the entire world lists 21 entries. Of these, 9 and 3 entries, respectively, are not incorporated into this bibliography.

AUTHORSHIP OF TAXA. During the course of the compilation, it was discovered that the authorship of certain taxa has sometimes been wrongly cited, largely as a result of pen-slips. The following 2 instances are probably the most interesting and deserve more detailed comments. Firstly, Latreille (1829a, b, 1836) and Drapiez (1845) accredited the authorship of the genus Strebla to Dalman (1823) who almost simultaneously published a paper under the same title "Analecta entomologica" (but with a different subtitle, contents and by a different publisher) as did Wiedemann (1824). It was the latter author who actually published the name Strebla (cf. annotations under Latreille 1836). Secondly, Macquart (1835) and Westwood (1840) cited the original reference of Lipoptena phyllostomatis [now known as Aspidoptera phyllostomatis (Perty)] as "Nitzsch: Voyage du Prince Maximilien de Bavière" which Speiser (1900b: 32) and Maa (1965b: 385) failed to trace among the publications by either Nitzsch or Maximilian (Prinz zu Wied-Neuwied). — Neuwied is a city on the Rhine, 10 km NNW of Koblenz, once a part of Bavaria, and is not far from the present-day Bavarian border. — It is true that in his "Reise nach Brasilien in den Jahren 1815 bis 1817" (1820-21, Frankfurt a. M.) and "Beiträge zur Naturgeschichte von Brasilien" (1826-33, Weimar), Prince Maximilian did describe a number of bats and mention the findings of the insectan remains in the bat stomachs and of the ants damaging bat and other specimens. It is also true that in the summary of his collection of Brazilian insects (in "Reise...." 2: 299), some ants, butterflies (and spiders) but no batflies were included. There could not so far be found even the slightest evidence that Nitzsch had ever studied that insect collection. From the full title of Perty's (1830-34) work as cited in this bibliography (q. v.), it seems sufficiently clear that Macquart and Westwood confused the 1815-17 voyage ("Reise") of Prince Maximilian of Wied-Neuwied with the 1817-20 voyage sent by the order and under the auspices of King Maximilian Joseph I of Bavaria and with J. A. Maximilian Perty, author of L. phyllostomatis. In those days, Nitzsch was highly reputed in Germany as the foremost authority of ectoparasites while Perty was nearly a beginner. The former author's well publicized paper "Thierinsekten" (published in 2 different journals of good reputation) probably heavily overshadowed the latter author's privately printed "Delectus." Only by such coincidence and under such circumstances, could the wrong citation by Macquart and Westwood have happened.

AUTHORS' NAMES. For practical reasons, full names are not written out for the authors listed in this bibliography even when they are easily traceable. For instance, the full name of Macquart is Pierre Justin Marie Macquart. In all his papers that I have consulted, it was simply given as J. Macquart and sometimes even more simply as M. [onsieur] Macquart. In this and similar cases, the spelling-out of the initial "J." (which is the one most often used by Macquart), but not "P." and "M." as well, seems not only fairly sufficient but also may avoid certain unnecessary confusion. The compound surnames of some authors are at times rather perplexing. Thus, E. Balcells R.[ocamora] has been listed incorrectly by certain earlier workers as E. R. Balcells; A. Hoffmann Mendizabal, as A. H. Mendizébal; A. de Mirarda Ribeiro, as A. d. M.

Ribeiro; and so on. To save space, the Subject Index of this bibliography lists only the surnames for authors unless some confusion (such as E. L. Kessel vs. Q. C. Kessel) may occur; and in cases of compound surname, either only the first word of such surnames is used, or the second word is abbreviated, such as Miranda Rib., Schuurmans Stkh. For the same reason, the name(s) of the junior author(s) of a joint paper is represented in the Subject Index by the abbreviation "et al." except in cases like Theodor & Moscona vs. Theodor & Peterson.

DATES OF PUBLICATION. In this bibliography, there are fortunately only a few references (such as Perty 1833) of which the dates of publication need some annotation. Very few references which include new taxa of batflies came out in the same years, and it appears unnecessary to give annotations regarding the more exact publication dates (i.e., months and days) for such references. The a, b, c for the same year's papers of an author (such as Ferris 1925a, 1925b) are, however, not necessarily arranged in the order of their publication dates. Incidentally, Westwood's revision of the genus Nycteribia and Falcoz's descriptions of the New Caledonian Pupipara are dated respectively from 1834 and 1921 rather than, as cited by most subsequent workers, from 1835 and 1923.

ORIGINAL TITLES OF REFERENCES. In the section "Titles and Annotations", the titles of various references listed are as originally given except for the change of the capital to small letters for certain words, the omission of suprageneric names originally given in parentheses (such as Diptera Pupipara, Diptera: Nycteribiidae) and the replacement of the subtitles, in part or as a whole, indicated by ellipses.... It should be added that the titles of certain references (such as Loveridge 1923, Starrett & Torre 1931) are quite vague and seemingly have nothing to do with the batflies. Such references might also have been inadvertently overlooked by me, and without annotations, their contents concerning the batflies can hardly be evaluated. On the other hand, the titles of a few references (such as Kishida 1928, Meijere 1899b) are so clear and exact that there is no need for an annotation.

RELATIVE IMPORTANCE AND RARENESS OF REFERENCES. The references listed in this bibliography vary greatly in relative rareness and scientific value. In fact, many of them have sunken deeply and quietly into the sea of library files without causing the slightest ripple. The annotations are so designed that they are more detailed for the rarer and less important references. The users of this bibliography thus may not need to search for and directly consult such references.

SYMBOLS, ABBREVIATIONS. Abbreviations for serial publications are modified from the World List of Scientific Periodicals (London, 1963-). Symbols and other abbreviations (besides the commonly used ones such as nom. nud., sp., spp., ssp.) in the annotations are as below.

cat.=catalogue, checklist, with or without citing references.
des.=descriptive notes, short description(s).
fig(s).=figure(s) in text (figure[s] in plate are given in parenthesis, thus pl. 2 (3) for plate 2, figure 3).

g.=genus (genera).
incl.=including.
misc.=miscellaneous.
n.=new (for new taxa or new names).
Nyct.=Nycteribiidae, nycteribiid(s).

o. d.=original description.	Streb.=Streblidae, streblid(s).
rec.=original record (s), i. e., those not compiled from literature.	w.=with.
redes.=detailed redescription.	*=original (of an article) not seen by me personally but most of such have, at my request, been checked by friends.
rev.=revision, usually including keys, redescriptions, bibliography, etc.	!=sic (for typo- or orthographic error).

Acknowledgments. Without the cooperation and help in various ways from many people, this bibliography could by no means have attained its present shape and size. The space available here does not permit me to acknowledge my indebtedness to all of them individually. I am especially grateful to the librarians of the following institutions for free access to the book-files under their care: British Museum Department of Entomology, Museo di Storia Naturale di Genova, Rijksmuseum van Natuurlijke Historie in Leiden, Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard, B. P. Bishop Museum, and Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association Experiment Station. The kind help from K. Hürka (Praha), B. V. Peterson (Ottawa), G. B. Thompson (Cambridge, England), O. Theodor (Jerusalem) and many others in supplying additional references or useful information is also deeply appreciated.

II. SUBJECT INDEX

For those subheadings prefixed by double asterisk () the entries listed under the subheading "Revisions" should also be consulted. Certain entries (such as Dudich 1924, Rudow 1871) listed under the subheading "Faunistics, Individual Countries" might have wrongly been placed because the political boundary-lines of the involved countries have been changed often, or the exact type localities of the involved species were not given in their original descriptions. Diacritic marks of the authors' names are omitted in this index.
